eForce Compliance Joins Coalition for American Electronics Recycling

eForce Compliance has joined the Coalition for American Electronics Recycling, an organization representing U.S. companies that believes electronics should be recycled in a secure and sustainable manner. The coalition is aligned with the mission of eForce Compliance to sustainably manage e-waste within the United States while creating jobs domestically. eForce is proud to be located in Philadelphia and strives on maintaining a local presence within their local community. The Coalition originated in the summer of 2011 in order to support the passage of the Responsible Electronics Recycling Act in an effort to create jobs, protect America's security interests and enhance sustainability across the nation. eForce supports the mission of the CAER and continues to maintain environmentally responsible recycling practices.

"We applaud the efforts of the Coalition for American Electronics Recycling and support the vision of making electronic recycling sustainable in our country," said Jay Segal, President of eForce Compliance.
